

Anthony E. Dziepak

Short Narrative Biography

Version of 27 March 2017

Tony Dziepak is an economist with over 20 years of experience and a passion for promoting efficient markets. His research goal is to apply an industrial organization focus to inform policy decisions on economic questions using theoretical, empirical, and experimental methods.

Tony accepted a position with The MITRE Corporation in 2006 after serving as an economist for the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) for four years. While at MITRE, Tony has pursued applied research in the aviation industry, the transportation sector, the health care sector, and the defense department. Prior to the FAA, he was a professor of economics at Catholic University and Florida Atlantic University. Tony received his undergraduate and graduate education from Case Western Reserve University and Virginia Tech.